NEW ENERGY AND UTILITIES PARTNER AT DUNDAS & WILSON LONDON

Leading UK law firm Dundas & Wilson has announced the appointment of Hamish Lal as a partner in its Construction & Engineering practice. Lal will be based in D&W's London office.

A former barrister specialising in construction, engineering and project finance law, Lal will strengthen and complement the strong skill base at D&W where there are now 33 lawyers in the construction and engineering team.

Lal has both a contentious and non-contentious practice and will focus on D&W's clients in the energy and utilities sector, particularly nuclear projects. He will also participate in D&W's continued growth in the sector generally, from London.

D&W managing partner Donald Shaw said: "Energy and utilities is a core industry for us and Hamish will help grow our involvement in this area from a construction and engineering base. Hamish's background and experience really complement our deep skills in construction and engineering at an important time for the industry and for us."

Lal added: "I will, of course, miss the Bar but D&W is an exciting, unique and massive opportunity. D&W has a great reputation, drive and ambition and I am already enjoying being part of the team and contributing to its continued growth and success."

Lal joined D&W in London on 18 September, bringing the total number of partners at D&W to 75.
